Venezuelan Elections and Biden Supreme Court Reforms Related?

When autocrats and dictators don't get what they want, they change the rules...and the results.

31 Jul 2024

This weekend's fraudulent Venezuelan elections and President Biden's proposal to interfere in the workings of another branch of government both show the lengths some will go to if they don't like the results they're getting.

The weekend's sham Venezuelan elections in which Maduro claimed victory, in the face of evidence of fraud, is a disgrace to not only District 25 residents from Venezuela, but to freedom-loving people everywhere.

The Biden administration should be realists and not idealists. Any time their "experts" try to negotiate with tyrannical regimes (Venezuela, Iran, China, Russia...), it does not end well for the U.S.

The very same week, President Biden proposed reforming the Supreme Court after a string of Constitutionally-focused rulings which flew in the face of Democrat centralized control. Of note, the Democrats only started talking about Supreme Court reform, which would need Constitutional amendments, only when rulings did not go their way. If they were serious about this, they would've proposed them several years ago.

As part of the plan, which Vice President Harris endorsed, the Supreme Court would face term limits. How about we start with term limits for Congress and go from there?

Of course, this "plan" has no chance of gaining traction...it's a political ploy during election season.

The Executive and Legislative Branches have their own messes to clean up. As my dad used to say, "sweep your own side of the street before complaining about your neighbors."
